1. The North Korean Social Security Ministry on 22 July 1951 instructed subordinate offices to spread the following propaganda line on the Kaesong talks:
 - a. The truce was proposed by United States imperialists afraid of the North Korean offensive, and is a cowardly proposition designed to prolong their existence. It is similar to the tricky proposition they made when they backed CHIANG Kai-shek a few years ago, and is designed merely to give them an opportunity to reinforce their troop strength.
 - b. The truce talks will never result in an agreement, but if they desire a truce the United States imperialists should agree to do the following:
 - (1). Accept responsibility for the restoration of all damaged industrial equipment, housing, railroads, bridges, and other material destroyed in North Korea.
 - (2). Pay additional compensation for their slaughter and plundering in North Korea.

If these conditions should be accepted, the truce talks will be successful. The United States boasts of the abundance of her supplies, but she will be exhausted by the time she pays what we request.

 - c. For these reasons the talks will never be successful, and, since more tricks may be proposed, the people should be wary of them.
2. At 0900 hours 25 July, YUN Chung-nok (尹仲諾), chief of the intelligence section of the Social Security Ministry, issued the following warning to all employees in his section, stating that he did so at the instruction of the director of the Social Security Ministry:

"Employees shall not refer to any foreign soldiers by the name of the country from which they come. Do not, for example, refer to the country of the forces concerned by stating, "Oh, such and such a country's troops have come to help us," or, "They are soldiers from such and such country," when seeing foreign troops in North Korea. Reference to any nation's forces by using the name of that country will seriously affect our strategy. We must be careful therefore to refrain from using the name of the country concerned."

3. About 20 July LIU Shao-ch'i, chief of the organization department of the Chinese Communist Party, conferred secretly with PAK Hyo-sam (朴孝三), minister of Social Security, and told PAK that the Chinese Communist army would be able, by 15 August, to dispatch troops sufficient to carry on further fighting, and that therefore the Kaesong talks could be broken off at any time after that date.
